

Precise Control of Organic LED Emission Through Optically-Resonant Microcavity Confinement

Benjamin Isenhardt¹, Ekraj Dahal², Karen Cianiulli³, Matthew
S. White^{1,2}

¹Department of Physics, The University of Vermont, Burlington VT

²Materials Science Program, The University of Vermont, Burlington VT

³Asheville School, Asheville NC

May 2, 2019

Introduction

OLED Devices

Waveguides and the Fabry-Pérot Etalon

Microcavity-confined OLEDs

Experimental Methods

Results

Single Cavity Devices

Multi-cavity Devices

Conclusions

Introduction

OLED Devices

Waveguides and the Fabry-Pérot Etalon

Microcavity-confined OLEDs

Experimental Methods

Results

Single Cavity Devices

Multi-cavity Devices

Conclusions

OLED Devices

Waveguides

The Fabry-Pérot Etalon

Microcavity-confined OLEDs

Introduction

OLED Devices

Waveguides and the Fabry-Pérot Etalon

Microcavity-confined OLEDs

Experimental Methods

Results

Single Cavity Devices

Multi-cavity Devices

Conclusions

OLED Materials

Device Fabrication

Angle-Resolved Electroluminescence Spectroscopy (ARES)

Introduction

OLED Devices

Waveguides and the Fabry-Pérot Etalon

Microcavity-confined OLEDs

Experimental Methods

Results

Single Cavity Devices

Multi-cavity Devices

Conclusions

Single Cavity Devices

Peak Emission Wavelength

Band Narrowing

Effect of Bottom Electrode Material

Multi-cavity Devices

Behavior at Large Angles

Number of Resonant Modes

Bandwidth of Resonant Modes

Introduction

OLED Devices

Waveguides and the Fabry-Pérot Etalon

Microcavity-confined OLEDs

Experimental Methods

Results

Single Cavity Devices

Multi-cavity Devices

Conclusions

Conclusions

References

Acknowledgements

Questions?